Skin Cancer Awareness Month

Skin Cancer: Types and Causes

Are you aware that skin cancer is the most common form of cancer globally? Although not all types of skin cancer are related to UV light exposure from the sun or tanning beds, the majority of cases are attributed to this factor. The three primary forms of skin cancer include basal cell carcinoma (BCC), squamous cell carcinoma (SCC), and melanoma. This May, we're offering a 20% discount on all Skinceutical's sunscreen products.

Introducing DEXA

A DEXA (Dual Energy X-Ray Absorption) scan is a valuable diagnostic tool that provides essential insights into body composition, bone health, and overall well-being. Owing to its accuracy, DEXA is considered the gold standard for measuring body fat and bone density. In addition to measuring body composition, DEXA can identify key health markers associated with type 2 diabetes, heart disease, stroke, and osteoporosis. It's recommended that individuals aged 18-80 undergo regular DEXA scans to establish a baseline and track their health progress over time.
